

A New Perspective on Challenging Symptoms of Schizophrenia, and What to Do About Them

Presenter: Steven M. Silverstein, Ph.D., Director of Research - Rutgers University Behavioral Health Care, Professor of Psychiatry - Rutgers Robert Wood Johnson Medical School

Join us in exploring how, through a new perspective, we can begin to turn cognitive impairments and negative symptoms into positives.

This presentation suggests a new way to understand and treat people with Schizophrenia. In addition to considering the severity of the illness and the current medications an individual is taking, successful treatment to address social interaction, stress levels, and the person's belief about whether a goal is desirable and attainable will also be considered.

April 17, 2018

6:30 - 8:00pm

Rochester Psychiatric Center's Rehabilitation Auditorium

1111 Elmwood Ave.

Rochester, NY 14620

Register by calling Tammy
at 585.325.3145 x100

or online at www.mharochester.org/education

